ABOUT PROGRAM

The University Innovation Fellows (UIF) Program is hosted by the Design Lab at the University of Twente in the Netherlands. This program supports students in becoming innovators who transform their universities for the better. After completing training by the Design Lab, participants are officially recognized as Fellows and go on to create opportunities to learn about innovation, entrepreneurship, creativity, and design thinking alongside other UIF members and mentor faculty. They use their own universities as platforms to enhance their innovation skills. Fellows form a global community and go on to become leaders across a variety of fields worldwide.

*Note: Until last year, this program was hosted by Stanford University's d.school.
